The system of administration might, then, have been wisely continued, and the mutterings of restlessness and discontent disregarded by a nation which governs successfully men of all races in every quarter of the globe. But the mania for constitutions was too strong for the good sense of the government. Under Lord Seaton's com missionership parliamentary government was granted to the islands, and all the innate mischievousness and turbulence of the national character showed itself at once. Of course, the constitution is an absurdity. The islands are our military posts, and must be gov- seen by the following:

"Not only," continued the speaker, " is every Ionian ready to make use of every means against it, but he is willing to sign with a pen dipped in his own blood that union with Greece is our sole wish and desire." Here the president rose, and with him all the members of the house, crying with enthusiasm. "Yes, yes, yes!" "Let us, therefore, prove to the foreigner what we have already proved, that what is most grateful to us is to get rid of his protection." Then M. Curi, a member for Corfu, calls on the members of the other six islands for a demonstration, and they all rise up shouting with enthusiasm. "Let us put a stop," cries the speaker, " to all our proceedings as a proof protection." Then the house appointed a committee of inquiry, upon which Lombardo exclaims, "We have voted to-day unanimously our national resurrection. * * * * You subscribe with your blood the union with Greece.
